Once considered a concern only for unionized employers, the National Labor Relations Board is attempting to assert itself into almost every employment relationship in the country. Find out why every employer should be concerned with the latest efforts by labor, the NLRB and the federal government to thrust new obligations upon them. More importantly, learn what employers can do to prepare to manage and compete in this much more antagonistic environment.

- The NLRB's Position on Social Media
- The "Boeing" Issue
- Proposed Changes to Election Rules
- New Posting Obligations
- New Obligations for Federal Contractors

Additionally, learn about the most common mistakes employers make which result in employment litigation, and how to avoid those mistakes.

- Top 7 Ways to Become Known as The Defendant, and How to Avoid Them

Our speakers Warne Heath and Craig Oliver will bring you up to date on these topics.
